“Be Still My Life” – Teresa Jarzynski

In her art Teresa Jarzynski often turns her attention to ordinary, everyday scenes that capture moments of stillness which produce a sense of calm and tranquility. The process of painting allows her to get in touch with the better part of herself, to evolve, and get closer to understanding who she is meant to be and where she fits into the world at large. By focusing on subject matter such as landscapes, inanimate objects, and people from various encounters in life, she challenges herself to transform the ordinary into the extraordinary. Although each painting initially stems from direct observation, the act of painting turns each reality into an imagined place - a world of its own that becomes a relationship of sorts between herself and the work and where she is able to experience the desired serenity.

“May Beauty Follow” – Vladimir Zabavskiy

In his most recent paintings, Vladimir Zabavskiy explores the transition between realism and abstraction. Using algorithms to produce variations in generative design software, most of the paintings are based on manipulated parameters that create an alternative picture. The results are playful, architectonic expressions that appear almost otherworldly—Cubist-like but not Cubist inspired. Zabavskiy uses a rich palette of colorful oils, including gold leaf, coupled with crackling and layered effects that produce vivid and compelling images. Lines, planes, and shapes are all visible, making an otherwise two-dimensional canvas seem anything but. To his surprise, Vlad discovered a unique three-dimensional quality to his paintings: polarized 3D glasses greatly enhance the painting’s depth of field.

“Doors of Distinction” – Jenny Nordstrom

Jenny Nordstrom's first solo photography show will feature her most beloved body of work -- doors! Doors are the faces that people present to the world, but also symbolic portals to new places and opportunities. Jenny's deeply saturated, textured images will take viewers on a journey around the world, including images from Italy, Paris, Iceland, and Thailand, as well as U.S. cities like New Orleans, Tampa, Washington DC, and others.
