

Springtime Trio

Mark Hamilton

My working career was as an engineer, but I went to night school to earn an art degree. Over the years my focus was on printmaking and painting. Since I retired, I have been doing more sculpture, including concrete casting. Recently I have been experimenting with found objects as sculptural materials. The forms of manufactured items have an innate beauty, especially when mixing forms, colors, textures, and materials. Most of the objects I use are discovered in junkyards and thrift stores. Some of the works include solar powered lights to showcase the 3-dimensional features of the pieces.

Kimberly Castro is a fine art acrylic & gouache painter who operates under the business name The Street Corner Gallery. Kimberly's paintings are easily identified by her use of vibrant color saturation. Kimberly has lived in Tucson for over 30 years and continues to be inspired by the surrounding desert colors and textures. It is her goal to give back to her city by helping to develop a service-based community and eliminate stigmas around the starving artist mentality.

My name is Patty Sjolín. Sjolín is Swedish and pronounced 'show-leen'. I work in colorful vibrant acrylic paint. I love movement in my paintings with a touch of whimsy. My main creative influence was Walt Disney. I grew up on the old Disney animated movies and knew I would work there one day. Although I never got to work at Disney, I did get to work for Lisa Frank here in Tucson back in the 90's. Some of my characters I developed have been seen around the world!
